GOVERNMENT AFFAIRS

Council confirms appointment of Theresa O'Donnell as new director of planning

Source: City of Vancouver

City council has appointed Theresa O'Donnell as Vancouver's new director of planning and general manager of planning, urban design and sustainability, effective immediately. O'Donnell has an extensive background with more than 30 years in policy development, program administration, and economic development, including as director of planning and development for the cities of Las Vegas, Nevada and Arlington, Texas.

She also served as director of sustainable development and construction, interim assistant city manager, and chief resilience officer for the City of Dallas, and has managed multimillion dollar operating and capital budgets. O'Donnell joined the City of Vancouver in March 2019 as deputy director of planning.

Saanich Commercial and Rental Apartment Building Survey
